Aims of the Course	As one of the core courses of the Department of Protohistory and Near Eastern Archaeology, this course examines the historical development of Neolithic and Chalcolithic cultures in Anatolia, starting from the Levant and covering Anatolia, the Euphrates Basin, Inner Syria, and the Palestine region from the Paleolithic period to the Bronze Age. The course focuses on archaeological cultures and their associated material culture, technology, subsistence systems, and elements of communal and social life.The course will be conducted with a focus on settlements in the geography of Anatolia—which established world firsts—addressing phenomena such as early settlements, the transition to an agricultural economy, reasons for sedentarism, climate change, and the first temples and palaces.
