Aims of the Course	The aim of this course is to examine active citizenship within the framework of social policy, democracy, human rights, and social participation, and to evaluate the role of citizen participation in decision-making processes and rights-based approaches in the development and implementation of social policies. The course covers citizenship and social rights, participatory democracy, civil society organisations, volunteering, local governments, social responsibility, social justice, social inequalities, and efforts to combat social exclusion. It also examines how cooperation among public institutions, civil society organisations, and other social actors contributes to social policy processes. The course aims to enable students to analyse the relationship between active citizenship and social policy from both theoretical and practical perspectives, evaluate participatory policy processes, and develop rights-based, inclusive, and feasible recommendations for addressing social problems.
